hanging down, the other drawn back with the hair behind.

The women were all in wigs, generally as different as possible from the true colour of their hair; their faces almost totally obscured. Their caps and hats had much gold and velvet, and very small feathers; their waists immoderately short, their faces daubed, their necks covered, their gowns muslin, with a great profusion of gold spangles and gold fringe.

We had some excellent singing by Garat, who has a delightful voice and great taste; and as he was there as one of the company, perfectly at his ease, he sang jovially and without being asked. He has thirty thousand livres for twelve nights at the theatre. A Mademoiselle Molinos played on the harp, and Mademoiselle du Fresnoy on the piano, in an astonishing manner.

At half-past four we sat down to a grand dejeuner; then concertoed till ten; then supped; then danced—(pas moi)—it would not have suited my diplomatic dignity, and still less my gray hairs; for I am grown very gray from living with Lord Malmesbury.
